

SAFE AT WORK

ARE YOU SURE YOU'RE SAFE?

Work safe - and help others do the same

You can make a difference for your own safety and for your co-workers. Share your expertise about how to work safely, and help new colleagues build good safety habits by explaining things in a clear and friendly way.

Your daily work is fast, physical, involves sharp tools and you work alongside many nationalities. You can use the following safety tips when you do your job and as a starting point for a talk about safety with your coworkers, so everyone gets home safely.

If you are not sure you understood something, speak up – even if you only understood part of it. In Denmark it is completely normal to ask questions about how work is done or to ask for the instructions again when needed.

Use your knife safely

Handle and place the knife correctly, and keep it in the sheath when you walk.

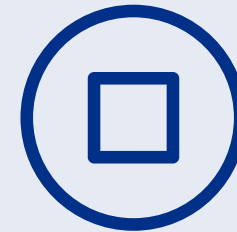

Keep floors clean

Rinse, scrape or wipe the floor if there is spilled blood, fat or meat.

Use your protective equipment

Put on cut-resistant glove and chainmail when working with knives.

Stop and report

Report errors, dangers and concerns to your supervisor or safety rep.

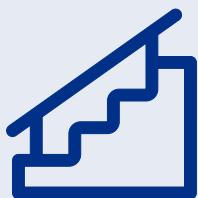

Ask if you are unsure

If you don't know the safe way to do the task.

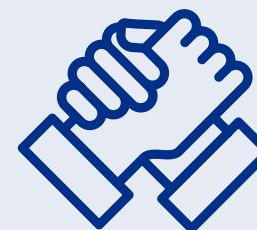

Take the safe route

Use the marked paths instead of the fastest way.

Use the handrail

When you walk on stairs.

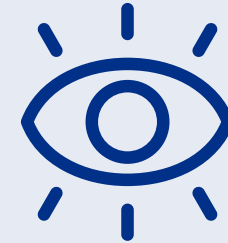

Help new colleagues

Show new colleagues how to follow the safety rules.

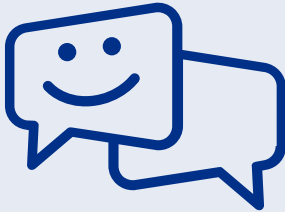

Highlight the good

Speak up when you see something done well.
Demonstrate the safe solution when you see risk.

Be visible

Lead by example and show that safety comes first – even when it's busy.

Speak kindly

If you see something unsafe, and help new colleagues build good safety habits.

Look up – look down

Be aware of your surroundings and what is happening around you.

Adapt your communication

Use body language and signs if language or noise makes communication difficult.
